

Take the c4cast.com tour
a quick journey through our forecast community and its features.

Welcome to the ultimate source of community-based economic and financial forecasts, plus a vast collection of tools, tips, and chunks of just plain useful forecasting information. [FAQ]

Today's Feature Story

A number of forecasting contests have been conducted in the past. Such contests range from various wagering events, such as Superbowl pools, to various financial forecasting contests. Typically, such conventional contests seek to identify the best predictor for the outcome of a single event. For example, the Investorsforecast website allows participants to predict where the Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) will be and what the prices of certain stocks will be at the end of next week. The person submitting the most accurate prediction for the DJIA and the person submitting the most accurate prediction for an individual stock are each given a fixed monetary award, such as $300. Other contests in the financial arena typically allow participants to invest an imaginary amount of money, with the winner being the person whose portfolio is the largest at the end of the contest. One example of such a contest can be seen at the Fantasystockmarket website.

What's New?

New features & improvements

Login:

Enter your username above.

Please take a couple of minutes to

REGISTER

so you can:

- Join the Tournament and enter your forecasts.
- Participate in forums and other community activities.
- Find out what is in store for you in the Library.

You will also be given the opportunity to subscribe to our great c4cast.com data products.

FIG. 1

c4cast.com

Home

About Us

Site Map

My Account

Help

Tournament

Community

Library

Store

Press Center

ALL ONLINE BROKERS

DISCOVER BROKERAGE

Search c4cast.com for

Help on searching Advanced search

Today's Featured Commentary

A number of forecasting contests have been conducted in the past. Such contests range from various wagering events, such as Superbowl pools, to various financial forecasting contests. Typically, such conventional contests seek to identify the best predictor for the outcome of a single event. For example, the Investorsforecast website allows participants to predict where the Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) will be and what the prices of certain stocks will be at the end of next week. The person submitting the most accurate prediction for the DJIA and the person submitting the most accurate prediction for an individual stock are each given a fixed monetary award, such as $300. Other contests in the financial arena typically allow participants to invest an imaginary amount of money, with the winner being the person whose portfolio is the largest at the end of the contest. One example of such a contest can be seen at the Fantasystockmarket website.

Soapboxes ~ 11

One hundred people with opinions interact with the community on issues related to forecasting. Your ratings determine whether they get to keep their soapbox. Get in on the action.

Games ~ 12

Sharpen (or test) your abilities. Take a few minutes to unwind with economic and financial games of skill (and some luck).

Education ~ 13

Sign up for a class, check out some educational courseware, or target some educational reading.

Top Rated Soapboxes

Soapboxes most highly rated by the community

1. Art (1050)

Descriptive Text

2. Art (1005)

Descriptive Text

3. Art (990)

Descriptive Text

4. Art (983)

Descriptive Text

5. Art (950)

Descriptive Text

6. Art (940)

Descriptive Text

7. Art (927)

Descriptive Text

8. Art (895)

Descriptive Text

9. Art (882)

Descriptive Text

10. Art (892)

Descriptive Text

a ↑

FIG. 2

c4cast.com

Home

Tournament

About Us

Community

Site Map

Library

My Account

Store

Help

Press Center

The new Turbo. Drivers wanted.

Search c4cast.com for:

Help on searching Advanced search

Today's Featured Article

A number of forecasting contests have been conducted in the past. Such contests range from various wagering events, such as Superbowl pools, to various financial forecasting contests. Typically, such conventional contests seek to identify the best predictor for the outcome of a single event. For example, the Investorsforecast website allows participants to predict where the Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) will be and what the prices of certain stocks will be at the end of next week. The person submitting the most accurate prediction for the DJIA and the person submitting the most accurate prediction for an individual stock are each given a fixed monetary award, such as $300. Other contests in the financial arena typically allow participants to invest an imaginary amount of money, with the winner being the person whose portfolio is the largest at the end of the contest. One example of such a contest can be seen at the Fantasystockmarket website.

Basics of Forecasting ~21

Financial & Economic Data ~22

Soapbox Archives ~23

Article Archives ~24

Recommended Books ~25

The Dumpster ~26

Press Releases ~27

20 ↗

FIG. 3

Top Rated Articles

Articles most highly rated by the community

1. Wool \(8/5\)

Descriptive text

2. Wool \(8/0\)

Descriptive text

3. Wool \(8/2\)

Descriptive text

4. Wool \(7/5\)

Descriptive text

5. Wool \(7/0\)

Descriptive text

6. Wool \(7/4\)

Descriptive text

7. Wool \(6/7\)

Descriptive text

8. Wool \(6/5\)

Descriptive text

9. Wool \(6/0\)

Descriptive text

10. Wool \(6/9\)

Descriptive text